REBS ADD ANOTHER TO LIST OF VICTORIES

Shorty Lathrop Outpitches Johns, the College Star, Who Went Sixteen Innings in Stogieville. Pittsburgh Club Shows Strong Defensive Play. BY GUS MALBERT.

Red Cramer, here as war correspondent with those truly unselfish Pittsburgh Stogies, lolled back-if a war correspondent ever really lolls-in his easy chair, ejected a few remarkable ebullitions in choice Pittsburghese, and concluded by opining that the Rehs were some ball team, to which the populace added a mighty "Hear! Hear!" The answer to the equation is that Newnham has jogged one step nearer the top in the race with the Stogics for first honors. When the steam roller subsided the chalkmarks formed themselves

When the steam roller subsided the chalkmarks formed themselves into a 2 and a I, with the Rebs on the heavy side.

Still the aforementioned person with the burnished gold—society talk for red hair—hirsute adorment must be given credit for vast descrament, even though ha dwell in the camp of the enemy. There was never a minute yesterday when the Rebs didn't look like the better ball club. The difference wasn't so great, but it was enough to be noted. Shorty Lathrop got a life on Warren's boot and Johns, the college boy, were pitted to measure strength, just as they were in that sixteen-inning affair up Pittsburgh way, and Shorty won the laurel wrenth, hurling with accuracy and rare judgment.

Actually the score doesn't quite denote what the Rebs did do. Johns can thank some exceptionally classy ball playing for the small score against him. Warren, at the midway house, did a little stun with one hand, which certainly stopped an embryonic raily in the seventh. Bill Prout was look and launched a twister, which had severy carmark of landing safely in Bill Prout was leave to an attribute his he hasn't got a whole lot, but what he heavy side.

Also be it noted right now and yelled rather vociferously that Bert Blue is one sweet catcher. Lots of the filingers who are hovering around the local lads.

Lathrop got a life on Warren's boot of the senses with of a chance, but was, offering on the outside corner and wall traveling to third, from where in romped home on Adler's sacrifice left to life the line.

Just to show that they knew something about the game, and in order with the local rank.

BY GUS MALBERT

Famous sayings of famous men: 'There's always one more game to win."—Deacon Phillippi.

Unless the kodiac reads wrong it will be the Deacon himself against our own Bill Taylor. George Cowan acts like a regular umps. At any rate, he is a vast im-provement over the brand which has come this way recently.

Pitching winning ball games isn't always a case of the fellow who has got the most. Take Shorty Lathrop, He hasn't got a whole lot, but what he has he uses to advantage.

Hats are off everywhere to the galloping bunch of youngsters which Clarke Griffith has put together in a ball club. It may be that the present splurge is only a finsh in the pan, just as Roger Bresnshan and his club did last year. It may be that the young fellows will not be able to stand the gaft or go the long route. But regardless of anything which may happen in the future they have a record which has never been equaled in base-

There are several reasons why the club has been winning of late. And it isn't all Waiter Johnson, peer of them all that he is. There has been an infusion of young blood, and young blood means confidence, speed, stamina, and an inability to know when it is licked. Five men on the club are hitting above the .300 mark, while Clyde Milan, the star outfielder, is hovering close to his natural gait, which is just above the coveted mark. When a club is hitting at that stride, with its pitchers going sood, it can't be whipped. Connie Mack is pretty nearly right when he remarks that when a club wins sixteen consecutive games it isn't luck, and that club must be watched in a pennant race.

But one of the surest points brought tome was that printed in a Washing-on paper. It appears that one of the opnotchers was to work against the

The six-club regime began yesterday in the Virginia League. How successful it will be the season will teil. Jack Grim, whose marriage will take place to-morrow, says that he can't make money in the Virginia League and that next season he expects to organize a league in the Eastern part of the State. The mere reduction to a six-club circuit hasn't stopped the troubles in the league. There is something more vital than the number of cities in the circuit. The fact of the matter is that Richmond is tired of Class "C" baseball, and the magnates of the Virginia League had as well realize it now as later. Richmond is the keystone in the Virginia League arch, and with Richmond dissatisfied the league will continue to have troubles.
